

Individual Reflection

Sally Chung

April 2022

Individual reflection - Week 4

What do I want to learn or understand better?

Learning objective - Backend connecting with frontend

A: Currently, I have no idea of how the backend and frontend are functioning together. Probably it is the same problem as previous weeks; not knowing how angular works. For this week, I have created so our form is able to connect or is ready to connect to the backend - basically, so our frontend is able to capture the event that is happening. Though, I am able to see how they are connected, but the problem for me is the lack of knowledge of how the programs and language is working.

B: For the upcoming week, I hope to work further with the backend and to see how this could successively help our frontend (buttons) to work. Hopefully I'll have the energy to do things, since I am noticing small hints of getting a cold.

C: The previous weeks I've read about angular and how it works, now it is all about testing and trying if things will work. For this I will have to try it out in code and see if the components will work out together - probably struggle a lot too.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I will be communicative and listen if problems occur. Since I am getting a sense of how angular is working, this could be a benefit.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

Hopefully, I will have the energy and time to contribute to the project this week, as of now I am feeling a bit sick. I will do my best to see what needs to be taken care of.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

If I am sick I will try to do smaller tasks for a user story, which hopefully I am able to solve and make it work. Hopefully we will focus on more backend things, which includes using typescript and angular this week (I am eager to work with this).